TEXT COMPLERT.-

THE FOOTBALL CRAZE

A lot has changed since the days of one of the greatest English footballers, Sir Stanley Mathews, who died recently aged 85. At the top of his career he earned a maximum of £50 a week. Now players earn up to £20,000 a week!

Sir Mathews continued playing league football until he was fifty years old and was never "booked", but nowadays it is quite common for players to be given either a yellow card as a warning, or a red card, which means they are sent off the pitch for a foul or for bad behaviour.

Football is one of the most popular sports in Britain. Children like to start playing as soon as they are old enough to kick the ball. They begin to follow their favourite team, either watching on television or going to matches with their fiends and family. The best teams are in the premier league, the rest are in the first, second and third divisions.

Supporters often buy the same shirt and shorts as the players. This is known as the team strip. The styles change each season so the fans can find it very expensive to keep up.

Footballers are bought and sold by the managers of each team. The premier league has many international players who are highly paid in Britain. As a result many footballers have lifestyles similar to film celebrities or pop stars. In fact, two of the most famous people in Britain today are David Beckham, a footballer who plays for Manchester United and England, and his wife, Victoria, known as "Posh Spice" from the Spice Girls pop group. Fans follow the couple wherever they go.

In the World Cup or European matches, the United Kingdom divides into four separate countries: England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. There is always great competition when England and Scotland play each other. Many Scottish fans will support any other team which is playing against England, rather than cheer for their neighbours and fiercest rivals!

D) TRADUCCIÓ:

Els futbolistes són comprats i venuts pels directius dels clubs. La lliga principal té molts jugadors internacionals que estan molt ben pagats al Regne Unit. En conseqüència, molts futbolistes porten estils de vida similars als de les celebritats del cinema o als de les estrelles del pop. De fet, avui a la Gran Bretanya, dues de les persones més famoses són David Beckham, un futbolista que juga al Manchester i a la selecció anglesa, i la seva dona, Victoria, coneguda com la “Spice Pija” del grup de pop les “Spice Girls”. Els admiradors segueixen a la parella allà on van.
