AFRICA'S NEW TECH WARRIORS

1 Some women in Africa have taken up a career in technology, a field normally 2 1 dominated ..... (1) men. Naula Kebba had trained and worked as ..... (2)
3 accountant in Kampala in Uganda. But last year she decided she needed to learn 4 about technology to keep up with the pace of change in business.
5 "The world ..... (3) much more demanding now," she said. "Everything now 6 involves technology." But 37-year-old Naula had no background in technology
7 and ..... (4) few places in Uganda that offer training in computer science.
8 2 The answer lay in a six-month course on internet technology skills ..... (5) the 9 Uganda Communications Institute.
10 Armed with ..... (6) new knowledge, Naula has set up her own information 11 3 technology consultancy. "It built up my confidence," said Naula. "I can deal with 12 technical problems myself instead of relying on someone else when something 13 goes wrong."
14 ..... (7) was so encouraged by her training that she persuaded her sister and her 15 cousin to follow in her footsteps. Even her husband is considering whether he 16 should do the same. The course in internet technology is part of an international 17 education programme backed by the US tech giant Cisco Systems. It brings 18 together business, governments, international organisations and donors to 19 4 promote technology skills in developing countries. The aim of the programme is 20 ..... (8) people in developing countries learn and improve their information
21 technology skills, with the hope of ..... (9) the distance with industrialised
22 countries. There are now more than 90 academies in 32 developing countries, 23 with more than 2,500 students and nearly 500 graduates.
24 Julianne Susanne Sansa is an instructor at one of the 30 centres in Africa. She 25 5 ..... (10) working at the Institute of Computer Science in the Ugandan 26 capital, Kampala, 14 months ago. For her, it was like a dream coming true.
27 "This is something I have always wanted to do," said 34-year-old Julianne. "I 28 6 have always had an interest in computers. People look up to you. It is a privilege 29 to do this job."
