The most popular attraction

Dolphins and killer whales are some of the most intelligent creatures on this planet. They are also the most popular attractions in many zoos and there are special 'Dolphinariums' all over the world in places like Tokyo, San Diego, Mexico City and Sidney. The dolphins, together with killer whales and seals, perform for delighted crowds. They jump into the air, play football, wear enormous glasses and even 'sing' for the public.

Many of the dolphins that go to zoos and dolphinariums are hunted in the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean. They are chased by boats and planes and caught in nets. Then they are not given any food until they are prepared to eat dead fish, the food they are going to eat in captivity.

Mark Smith, an animal expert, went on a hunt for dolphins and was shocked. 'It was the worst thing I have ever seen, and certainly the cruellest,' he says. 'The dolphins were very frightened and exhausted. Three of them died in the nets and two more were badly injured.'

Life for dolphins and killer whales in captivity is not much fun, either. They are kept in small tanks and they suffer from heart failure and infections diseases. Some are even killed by visitors. At one zoo, in England, a young dolphin died when a child threw a coin into his blow-hole.

Fortunately, thanks to the campaigns of some animal rights organisations the number of dolphinariums in North America and Europe has been drastically falling in the last years. For example, in the UK there used to be seventeen and now all of them are closed.
